Project Story

Groundwork London was appointed to work on behalf of Ealing Homes to deliver three Play-builder sites for Ealing Homes. The project was challenging from the outset as it required meeting the needs of the community through a number of engagement stages and processes. As the areas were in close proximity to housing it also meant that additional care had to be taken when positioning and choosing the play equipment for the site.

Proludic were commissioned by Groundwork to design and build the play area as they were the company who demonstrated the best understanding of the design for play principles within a social housing setting. All the equipment selected for the sites were sympathetically chosen to compliment the surroundings and blend in well with the housing estate. This enables the local communities to bond with their new play areas and has generated positive popularity since the installation.

"Proludic showed a detailed understanding of the requirements of this project from design stage through to delivery. They have a flexible approach and this greatly benefited the process as we undertook some challenging consultation events together in order to meet the needs of the communities."

Play Spaces for The Whole Community

Playgrounds provide opportunities for local communities to come together at many different levels. They appeal to all ages, abilities and backgrounds, and they help both children and adults to meet and make friends. Creating a play space for varying age groups also encourages families to be active and have fun together.
