Project Story

Corsham Town Council were looking to create a unique and one-of-a-kind destination playground. They worked with the local community and held consultation events to get a real feel for exactly what kind of equipment was desired by all.

We were able to meet the brief with unique rope structures within the design scheme. As the park is next to a renovated leisure centre, we were able to introduce design aspects such as colours and shapes as part of the scheme to create a real cohesion between the building and park, resulting in a local hub for many to enjoy.

"From initial design, through to completion, the whole process has run very smoothly, resulting in a great new facility that children and parents love."

- David Martin, Corsham Town Council

After

We are delighted with the way Proludic worked with us to create a fantastic 'destination' play area at Springfield Park.

The Suspended World

A suspended world means exploring new ways of playing and managing space and heights. It means creating a world in which users never touch the ground, providing a real test of balance and self-control. The trails demand strength, flexibility and balance as well as concentration to successfully pass from one element to another. Children explore an airborne trail in a fun, acrobatic, original ways, through structures connected to the pyramid, the central element in the Suspended World: the arch, the swaying unstable footbridge and the cableway, which is 4m long. The nest is placed during these physical elements and provides a place to take a short rest or catch your breath.
