Project Story: As a long-standing client, East Lothian Council, were passionate in promoting inspiring play areas in their catchment area. Part of this strategy involved trying out new innovative equipment. Proludic has a very strong history of delivering play areas for this particular local authority over the past 20 years.

The tender brief was to design a modern play area that can cater to children of wide age ranges and abilities within a set budget, for the supply of the equipment only. The requirement for inclusivity and diversity was high on the agenda, as well as ensuring the customary WOW factor! Therefore, Proludic included some of their latest pioneering products in the design.

Within Proludic's design, they included several inclusive items. These include a wheelchair-accessible roundabout and a large KaYop multiplay unit with wide access points and a double-width slide - the first of its kind to be built in Scotland! Proludic also included a 5.4 meter high treehouse with a long stainless steel tubular slide. The double cableway and the cantilever swing are also both new to Scotland. A large number of other items in the play area ensure endless play activities with swinging, climbing, rotating, and much more!

« As a destination park, this has proved to be a very successful project. We have worked with Proludic for twenty years and the feedback for the park has been very positive. I have no hesitation in recommending Proludic whatsoever. »
