Project Story: At the rear of Bond Avenue residential estate, there was an old, under-utilised play park that hadn't been used for years. The client wanted to replace the playground equipment using timber to sit aesthetically within the site which was edged by trees and a brook. The new equipment on the site needed to cater to children under 12 and provide all the moving elements to support play.

The client wanted a natural feel to the site and so our equipment selection came from our Origin' range which uses durable Robinia timber. The play area is finished off with colourful graphics which add to the nature-inspired theme by including shapes of foliage in the surfacing. The range of equipment specified in this design provided opportunities for children to swing, slide, rock, rotate, climb and glide, everything a child could ask for!

The new play area has seen the addition of a multiplay unit (J4939) which accommodates children from the age of two up to juniors. This is set alongside a seesaw (J4920), springer (J857) and roundabout (J2403) to ensure we met the needs of children up to the age of 12. In addition to this, Proludic included key visual items such as badger and squirrel animal posts to further enhance the nature theme and animal story to provide a complete play experience.

« This charming play area now fits perfectly into the surrounding area. The materials and colours of the play space perfectly address the client's brief without compromising on the longevity of the playground equipment or play experience for children. »
