Project Story: Taking its name from the canal that passes close by, Persimmon's new Canalside development offers a range of modern homes with family residents in mind. The developer had to incorporate a LEAP (Local Equipped Area for Play) into the estate plan to meet government obligations required on sizable developments.

Proludic was initially presented with a drawing from the client that would not comply with the current play standards. Using their experience, Proludic was able to redraw the plans to gain planning approval. The resulting project saw a fantastic play space facility for the homeowners and their children to enjoy for many years to come.

There is something for everyone to enjoy, from a twin set of swings to a focal multiplay unit from the popular Diabolo range. The inclusive roundabout can accommodate up to 8 users and the deck is also the perfect transfer height from a wheelchair should it be needed. The multiplay unit was specifically chosen for the wide range of play values it offers from climbing to sliding. It can also double up as a shelter under the unit for children to enjoy some time out from play.

« I was particularly proud of what Proludic achieved on this development as not only did we specify equipment with lots of play value suitable for a wide age range, but we also got the revised plans approved to comply with the relevant play standards. »
